Welcome to Clapham

At the centre of the village runs Clapham Beck, which starts life high on the slopes adjoining Ingleborough. It plunges to subterranean depths, emerging to run down into the lake, over a waterfall and through the village, passing beneath four bridges.

There are walks to suit all abilities. Leave the large car park for a stroll in the village or climb Ingleborough, one of the Three Peaks, which can be approached from the village by at least three recognised routes.

Follow the Estate Nature Trail and visit Ingleborough Cave. Afterwards carry on through Trow Gill to Gaping Cave. Afterwards carry on through Trow Gill to Gaping.

Clapham is the home of the Farrer family whose Ingleborough estate was established in the 18th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.

Below the waterfall at the head of the village stands the Church of St. James, which was founded in Norman times. The 12th Century tower remains, the rest of the church dates from the 19th Century. The family is responsible amongst many other things to the beauty and continued existence of the woods, fields, walls and moors which cradle the village and its farms. Reginald Farrer, a notable botanist, lived here.